

EDITORIAL DAY.

Its Observance Yesterday in Phoenix.

An Elaborate Turnout in the Day's Honor.

Business Houses Very Generally Close Their Doors—The Oration by Governor Powers.

For the second time in her history, Phoenix yesterday observed Memorial Day.

The business houses, as a rule, closed early in the day and all the citizens joined in the beautiful observance of a holiday that is now recognized as national in character.

In this land of flowers the memorial service in honor of the soldier dead acquires a new significance in that the tributes offered are fresher and more abundant than is possible in climes not so favored by nature as this.

There was an abundant display of bunting on the streets, many of the business houses being elaborately decorated, and some of them showing very great artistic skill in construction.

To the Grand Army men, of course, the greatest honor was shown, and the G. A. R. practically assumed entire charge of the day's observance.

The procession formed on Washington street, right, resting opposite the Irvine building, promptly at 4 p. m., and moved down Washington toward the city cemetery, where the graves of the veterans buried there had previously been designated.

The advance guard was made up of the firemen of the Phoenix Hose company No. 1, Phoenix Hose No. 2 and of the Hook and Ladder company, these being followed by the Phoenix band, the members of which organization acquitted themselves so well as to draw forth plaudits from the people assembled all along the line of march.

J. W. Owens Post, G. A. R., came next, headed by Department Commander George F. Coates and staff, escorted by Company B., N. G. A., under command of Captain Andre. The boys marched with reversed arms and acquitted themselves admirably upon their first public appearance.

John A. Logan Post, G. A. R., of Tempe, was next in line, followed by the three companies of the fire department, all making a good showing, and the parade was closed by a large number of citizens in carriages.

The marchers took the cars that had been ordered out to await them in front of the court house, on Washington street, and upon their arrival at the cemetery the band boys confirmed the good impression that they had already made by their excellent rendition of the following programme:

"Rest to the Brave" Stumble—(on entering cemetery).
Celestial Overture, Prendiville—"Searer My God to Thee."
"America."
Return march, "The Star"—Southwell.

Following the first number on the programme, Governor Powers was introduced as the orator of the day, and spoke in substance as follows:

COMRADES, COMRADES AND LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: We meet, not on an occasion of sorrow to mourn for the dead, but with thankful hearts, to commemorate the deeds of an army of fallen heroes that fought the battles of the Union against its foes, freed four million slaves and established foundations deeper than they had ever been laid before by human agency for an indestructible government of a free and enlightened people. And in the conflicts that resulted in the achievement of an end so glorious, six hundred thousand men sacrificed their lives.

Of that vast army that went forth in the strength of vigorous manhood with banners flying and drums beating, to return no more forever, one-half of them were our comrades, and all were our countrymen. Their bodies now lie buried on two hundred battle-fields or in cemeteries scattered all over this broad land. And today their graves have been decked with flowers by the beauty and chivalry of the grandest nation upon the earth.

It is fitting, fellow citizens, that while we contemplate the past and survey the blood-stained ground where victories that count most for mankind have been won, that we pay tribute to that other army of patriots long since passed away, that won independence from the British crown.

Although the star of empire has pushed westward until we, on this Pacific slope, have to look across a continent to view the narrow field of their operations, we do not forget the trials they endured or underestimate the value of their great achievements.

To them we owe our liberty and our right to the Star Spangled Banner. It is a satisfaction for us to know that their graves are kept green, and many of them today have been covered with flowers.

And now while we are gathered here, from every grade, whether of Revolutionary sires, or of Union or Confederate dead, sweet incense rises heavenward and calls blessing down upon the land we love, made inestimably dear by the sacrifices of blood and treasure it has cost to make and preserve its institutions forever free. Grand and beautiful as is the ceremony of growing flowers over soldiers' graves, the significance of the day would be lost if it failed to assist in implanting in the hearts of the youth of the land a deep and sincere patriotism. The 30th of May will become a day of sorrow, rather than of thankfulness, if, for any cause, selfishness or greed, from want of moral principle, from corrupting motives and influences, or from superstition and ignorance, devotion to the government and love for the flag that represents its power, shall ever occupy a place in the hearts of the people second to any other, save only that of the Supreme Ruler of the universe. He who watches over the destinies of nations and raises up friends to fight the battles of freedom.

The youth of the country are the patrimony bequeathed by heaven to each generation, and no nation can flourish that neglects to train them properly, and no education from which patriotism is eliminated is worthy of support. Patriotism is not a principle or faculty that is born with the child, boy or girl, but it is a virtue that can be taught and acquired. A patriot is one who loves his country with a pure undying love; one who stands at the altar and everywhere for its honor, integrity, prosperity and glory. A man to be a patriot need not necessarily be a soldier, for "God loves the plowman as well as the greater than war." But, let me tell you this, my countrymen, a man who, when occasion requires it, will not forsake father and mother, brothers and sisters, wife and children, and be willing to lay down his life for his country, is not a patriot. Patriotism calls for sacrifices as well as for love and pride of country.

I hope the time is near when patriotism shall receive paramount consideration in all our schools, when our boys will declaim patriotic speeches and our young ladies shall find their best themes for composition and recitations in subjects relating to the progress, power, purity and glory of our country. Then shall we be able to anticipate the time not far removed, when Arizona will be entitled to be considered the cradle of liberty, the Switzerland of America, when her citizens, planting with exultant pride at the grandeur of her mountains and the rich magnificence of her valleys, shall be exalted not by their number alone, but by their worth and patriotism; and when measured by this rule every citizen shall be esteemed to have population enough to constitute a State. When every Arizona boy shall raise his hat whenever he passes under the American flag, and in his heart the dominant thought shall be "This is my flag, and this is my country."

And now comrades of the Grand Army of the Republic, a parting word to you. It was our proud privilege to participate in the struggles that gave permanence to this government. The Revolutionary war of 1776, gave our country freedom from foreign domination, and gained recognition of its independence from all the nations of the earth. The war of the rebellion that ended in 1865, demonstrated our ability to cope successfully with internal enemies; and it was the supreme test of endurance.

Henceforth, neither foe from without or enemies within dare dispute the power and stability of the government. And the time is forever past when any individual, State or Nation can insult its flag and escape punishment by the sword of American soldiers. Hence, have not been made in vain, but they have been sanctified by heaven, and are the harbingers of freedom to the world.

The Declaration of Independence is the common heritage of all citizens of the Republic, whether native or foreign born. Bunker Hill, Lexington and Yorktown; Gettysburg, Vicksburg and Appomattox and all other battle-fields hallowed with the blood of American soldiers belong to no class or people, nor to any particular section, but they are the Nation's inheritance, and along with the Constitution and Star Spangled Banner, constitute the priceless legacy that will descend to posterity from generation to generation.

And now what shall be said of the future of the 30th of May? It, too, belongs to the American people, and must share the Nation's glory and immortality. Concealed in patriotic love, born of affection and sympathy, devoted to sacred memories and clothed in flowers, it will gather new attractiveness as time advances, and generations after the last remnants of the Grand Army shall have ceased to participate in its observance upon the earth, it will continue to be celebrated by American patriots with becoming reverence.
